DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Ford et al. (Ford), US 2002/0050451 A1.

The Ford patent discloses the claimed electrochemical conversion system, which converts the dissolved oxygen to water (see figure 1 and abstract). The reference further discloses the use of a power source to power said electrochemical system, the electrode is porous and would have the same surface texture and barrier material (see sections [0045] and [0055]-[0072]). The material being treated in an apparatus is given little or no patentable weight.

Accordingly, the claims are rejected.

Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Sugano et al. (Sugano), U.S. Patent 6,695,956 B2.

The Sugano patent discloses the claimed electrochemical conversion system, which converts the dissolved oxygen to water (see figure 6). The reference further discloses the use of a power source to power said electrochemical system, the electrode is porous and would have the same surface texture and barrier material (see col. 6, line 52 to col. 7, line 48). The material being treated in an apparatus is given little or no patentable weight.

Therefore, the claims are rejected.

Claims 1-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Strasser et al. (Strasser) WO 03/081702 A2.

The Strasser patent discloses the claimed electrochemical conversion system, which converts the dissolved oxygen to water (page 1, lines 9-38). The reference further discloses that the electrode is porous and would have the same surface texture and barrier material (see page 4). Therefore, the claims are rejected.

Consequently, the claims are rejected.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claim 7 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Claims 8-20 are allowable over the prior art of record.

The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: none of the prior art of record fairly disclose or render obvious the claimed method of removing dissolved oxygen from within a fuel system and electrochemically converting the dissolved oxygen within the liquid fuel to water and separating the water from the liquid fuel.

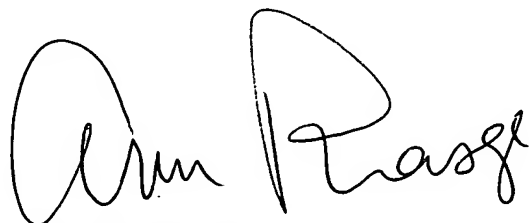

The prior art, while teaching the electrolytic removal of dissolved oxygen from a liquid, does not then teach the removal of the formed water from the liquid fuel.
